With the changing world, a joining of nations exists as never before. The problems of one nation become the problem of all nations. One of the major problems is health care for the people of the world. After many years of service in the health care fields, we came to the realization that a treatment modality could be tailored for the specific diseases of an area and could only be achieved through a highly localized vehicle. The enormous cost of permanent facilities has made health care evermore expensive, so an alternative source was explored. The realization that half of the worlds population lived in rural communities gave rise to the idea of a mobile clinic, or small hospital or clinic that could be united with a central processing system would be the least expensive way to provide health care.

To achieve the most economic way to provide this type of care, many types of hospitals and clinics were researched. The treatment modality was emergency care and prevention, rather than long term surgical care. Several types of medical care were thus able to be achieved. By changing the treatment modality, dental, general medical, ob-gyn, eye care and general health screening; each hospital and clinic could be equipped with the treatment of choice. By combining all of the treatment modalities in a single location - a form of one-stop for health care, would be available at a reduced cost.

By the multiplicity of equipment, maintenance could be simplified. The supplies could be standardized for time limits and replenished at monthly intervals. The labor force would be small and cross trained, giving a reduction of cost. Thus the entire approach to health care is one of mobility, specific treatment modalities, and minimum cost per individual treated. We fully
